INTRODUCTION

During my research into the history of the Castlemartin Hundred I have come upon much information contained in books of old Documents. Some of these books have no index so I made an index for my own use but as copies have been requested I have printed it out.

I would like to thank the University of Wales Press for permission to quote from Brut Y Tywysogyon or The Chronicle of the Princes Peniarth MS. 20 Version by Thomas Jones (1952)

Most of the rest of the documents listed are taken from The Calendar of Public Records relating to Pembrokeshire, Vol III Pembroke and Tenby by Henry Owen .Other sources are mentioned.

Brut y Tywysogyon edited by Thomas Jones Cardiff 1952 71

“One Thousand and one hundred (actually 1102) was the year of Christ when there was treachery between Henry, king of England and Robert, earl of Shrewsbury, who was called de Belleme, and Arnulf, his brother, who had come to Dyfed and had established the castle of Pembroke. And when the king heard that they were working treachery against him, he summoned them to find out the truth concerning that. But they sought pretexts to make an excuse, for they could not trust themselves to the king. And the king rejected their excuses after earning of their treachery. And when they knew that the king had learned of their treachery, and they dared not show themselves to him, they occupied their castles and fortified them, and summoned help to them from all sides and summoned to them the Britons who were under them, together with their leaders, namely the sons of Bleddyn ap Cynfyn, Cadwgan, Iorwerth and Maredudd. And they received them with honour, and gave them gifts and promised them many things and gladdened the land with liberty. And a second time they fortified their castles and encompassed them with ditches and strong walls and prepared provision and gathered together knights and gave them gifts. Robert occupied four castles, namely Arundel and Blyth and Bridgenorth and it was against Bridgenorth that the whole treachery had been aimed for he had built that without the king’s permission and Shrewsbury. Arnulf occupied Pembroke alone. And immediately after that they assembled hosts and summoned the Britons along with them. And while they were doing that Arnulf thought to make peace with the Irish and seek aid from them. And he sent messengers, that is, Gerald his officer, and many others, to Ireland and he asked for the daughter of king Muircertach for his wife. And that he obtained easily. The messengers came back joyful. King Muircertach sent his daughter and many armed ships along with her to the aid of his son in law. And for that reason the earls waxed proud against the king, without wishing for peace or agreement from him. And king Henry gradually gathered a host. And first he took the castle of Arundel. And thereupon through agreement and promises he gained possession of Blyth. And at last he came towards the castle of Bridgenorth, and with him a great host. And after surveying the castle from a distance he took council as to how he might capture the earl or subdue him or drive him out of the whole kingdom. And he resolved in council to send messengers to the Britons; and he summoned to him in particular Iorwerth ap Bleddyn, and he promised him more than he would obtain from the Earl. And he gave to Iorwerth freely, without rent or payment, that portion of Wales which was in the hands of those earls , for his lifetime so long as the king lived; that was Powys and Ceredigion and half of Dyfed the other portion was in the hands of fitz Baldwin and Ystrad Tywi and Cydweli and Gower. And when Iorwerth ap Bleddyn was going towards the king’s castle, he sent his war band to plunder the territory of earl Robert. And the war band, cruelly and hostilely executing their lord's behest, gathered vast plunder and ravaged the land and pillaged it; for the earl had before that ordered his men to take their flocks and herds and all their chattels into the land of the Britons, for he placed trust in them, not supposing that he would meet with opposition from them, not remembering the wrongs that the Britons had formerly suffered at the hands of Roger his father, and Hugh, his brother, and at the hands of their men, which was held in remembrance by the Britons.

Cadwgan, however, and Maredudd, sons of Bleddyn, were with the earl, knowing naught of that. And when the earl heard that, he despaired; and not trusting the help that was with him, because Iorwerth and his men had deserted him for Iorwerth was foremost of the Britons and the most powerful he sought a truce of the king to make peace with him or to leave the kingdom altogether.

Whilst they were about those things, Arnulf and his men had gone to meet his wedded wife and the fleet that had come to his aid. In the meantime Magnus, king of Germany (correctly of Norway), and with him a fleet, came a second time to Anglesey; and after felling for himself some trees for timber he returned to Man. And there he built three castles and a second time filled Man, which he had previously left desolate, with his men. And he asked for the daughter of Muircertach, king of Ireland, as a wife for his son. And he obtained her easily and gladly. And he set him up as king over that island. And there he stayed that winter.

And when earl Robert heard that, he sent messengers to him to beg help for himself; but he obtained none from him. And when the earl saw that he was besieged on all sides, he asked permission of the king to leave the kingdom; and the king granted it to him. And then he left all that was his and sailed to Normandy. And then the king sent to Arnulf and commanded him to go after his brother and to leave the kingdom or else to come at the king's will with his head in his lap. And when Arnulf heard that, he preferred to go after his brother than to submit to the king's will, and he surrendered his castle to the king; and the king sent a garrison to keep it.

And after that, Iorwerth ap Bleddyn made peace with his brothers and he shared the territory with them. And after a short while he seized Maredudd, his brother, and imprisoned him in the king's prison. And he made peace with Cadwgan, his brother, and gave him Ceredigion and a portion of Powys. And thereupon Iorwerth went to the king, thinking that he would have his promises from the king. But the king did not keep faith with him, but took from him Dyfed and the Castle and gave them to a certain knight called Saer. And Ystrad Tywi and Cydweli and Gower he gave to Hywel ap Goronwy.

Confirmation by William, archbishop of Canterbury, and legate, to Bernard, bishop of St Davids, and all sons of the church. He testifies to having been told by the king at the council held at Westminster, that the earl Arnulf, gave the churches of all his land in Wales, and the tithes, and twenty carucates of land, and much else, and ten pounds worth of tithes from the churches he held in England, to the monks of St Martin, Seez, and that the king had given and granted the same to the brethren some of whom dwelt at Pembroc. For his part he grants and confirms this, as the king himself confirms it in his charter.

Gerald de Barri, seeing that almost throughout the diocese of St Davids and especially in the region of Demetia and Keretia, by the lack of care of the prelates, neither tithes of wool nor cheese were given , went to Canterbury to which at that time, the church of St Davids, like the whole of Wales, was subject to provincial law, and showed these defaults to archbishop Richard, then primate of all England and legate, who sent him back to Wales as his legate, to amend these irregularities and others, which he should find there. The archbishop in his letters warned and enjoined all for the remission of sins, that those who had not formerly given these tithes, should give them. To those who were willing to give at his monition, he relaxed a third part of the penance enjoined, but the obstinate and those who refused to give , he ordered should be coerced strictly by ecclesiastical censure. All the Welsh forthwith obeyed these monitions and agreed to give those tithes, as did all others in the whole country, except the Flemings of Ros, and their accomplices, who would have been put under interdict for a long period, had not the sentence imposed been relaxed by the archbishop at the instance of Henry II to whom they went.

William Karquit, sheriff of the province (provincia) ordered his officers and apparitors to take eight yoke of oxen belonging to the priory of Penbroc, where Gerald de Barri was fulfilling his legation, and drive them to the castle. When required for the third time to restore the same, he utterly refused and even promised worse, Gerald sent word to him that unless he restored the oxen he would be placed immediately under sentence of excommunication, to which he replied that he would not dare to excommunicate the king's constable in his own castle. Gerald replied that when the sheriff heard all the bells of the whole monastery rung at triple intervals then he would know without doubt that he was being excommunicated. immediately the messengers had returned, by authority of his legation, with candles lit, he solemnly gave the sentence of excommunication on him, in the presence of the monks of that place, and many of the clergy of the country, and likewise caused all the bells to be sounded together, as was customary, to confirm the sentence or rather to announce the fact. On the morrow, the robber came to the castle of Lanwadein, before David , the diocesan bishop, and Gerald and his colleague, Master Michael, whom the archbishop had attached to him, who had gone there, restitution having been made and satisfaction given, when he was beaten with rods, he was to be absolved.

Papal indult to William, rector of Stackepol Elidir, in the diocese of St Davids, whose value hardly exceeds ten pounds, to hold an additional benefice, with cure of souls.

1260 March 3

(Rec Church in Wales, Stat Bk St David's pp 50 1)

Notification by Richard, bishop of St Davids that the prior and monks of St Nicholas Pemroch, with the consent of the abbot and convent of Seez have renounced to his hands and to his ordinance the right of patronage in the churches of St Wynnoc and Kylkemeran which belonged absolutely to that priory, renouncing all appeals thereon. The bishop with the consent of his chapter, has ordained concerning the said churches that the prior and monks of St Nicholas Pembroch, shall obtain and possess for ever to convert to their own use the church of Kylkemeran, with its profits, provided that the said church shall not be deprived of its divine offices. He ordains also that the canons residential of the church of St Davids shall obtain and possess for ever for their own use and maintenance the church of St Wynoc, with its profits, after the cession or death of Master William de Gogh, rector of the said Church. The prior and monks shall continue to receive the pension of one mark from the canons, which they used to receive, reserving to the bishop and his successors power to confer the vicarage when vacant. The collations and donations of the tithes and pensions of the churches, except the above mentioned pension which they have canonically in the bishopric of St Davids by the collations of the bishop's predecessors, with the consent of the patrons, the prior and monks shall possess as justly canonically and peacefully as in time past, by authority of the ordinary, saving in all things episcopal and archdiaconal rights in the said church.

Sealed by the bishop and his chapter at Lantefey, Wednesday after St David, 1259

Patent Roll, 49 Henry III, m . 16 (Cal., pp423 4)

Whereas John de Warenna and William de Valencia with armed men to the number of about a hundred and twenty men as well horse as foot, have now landed in the parts of Pembroke and keep themselves there, and many adversaries of the king and the realm from beyond seas, if they knew of their landing which has been made without the king's knowledge and will, as their leaving the realm was made peacefully and without impediment, would prepare to enter the realm with more will and spirit , to disturb the peace,or to give aid to the said John and William if they proposed to grieve the realm; the king has commanded the barons and bailiffs of the ports to keep their shore manfully and strongly against the invasion of anyone; and whereas the king has appointed Brian de Guiz as keeper of the parts of Somerset and Dorset, he commands all men of those counties to be of counsel and aid to the said Brian, in the keeping of the peace and especially in the defence of the maritime parts there; and if any are disobedient or remiss in executing the kings mandates ,the king will betake him forthwith to their persons and goods, notwithstanding any liberty,as against those who care not whether the kings and realm be given over to confusion and disherison. Mandate to the said Brian to be keeper of the peace of the counties accordingly; and the king has commanded the sheriff to be of aid and counsel to him. And as false rumours are being spread of the king, whereby trouble may be again stirred in the realm, the king has written to the said sheriff in the form of these presents, and if the sheriff is lax, the said Brian is to urge him to be diligent for the love of the king and the common utility of the realm.

Edward I created Pembroke a County Palatine [abolished by Henry VIII]

Although Edward I drew up the Statute of Wales which laid down that Welsh Common Law, language and customs would be respected. and which did not seek to put an end to "gravelkind" the welsh system of divided inheritance but it did add the provision that illegitimate sons could not be successors, that lawful widows were to be entitled to a dower, and that women could not succeed when there was no male heir.

PEMBROKE was to continue as a County Palatine owing direct allegiance to the crown where the earls were undisputed rulers owing no more than feudal loyalty to the king - they were allowed to administer their own justice, raise revenues according to their own determination and make and enforce whatever laws they wished. ROT PARL. Vol. 1, pp. 68 9.

William de Valance v. the King's Bailiff's touching jurisdictions within the Barony of Kemmeys. William Martin before the King and his Council at Clypstone, presented that William de Valance wrongfully, forcibly, entered his lands within the Barony of Kemmeys, and compelled him and his men of the said Barony to do suit at his county of Pembroke, and sought the king's pleasure. William de Valance appeared and said that in the full county court of Pembroke, it was adjudged that the said William Martyn, on account of several defaults in making suits which he ought to make to the county should be compelled to come to the said county court to answer divers men who had plaints against him. On behalf of the Queen Consort, her bailiffs submitted that all Crown pleas and all pleas pleadable before the Sheriff or Steward arising within the Barony of Kemmeys, pertained to her court of Haverford. William de Valence asserted that when Walter Marshal's inheritance was partitioned among his heirs, one of whom was Joan his wife, Joan was given all the profits, issues, and amercements of the Crown pleas and of all other pleas whatsoever pleadable before the Sheriff, both within the aforesaid Barony of Kemmeys and elsewhere within the precincts of the county of Pembroke; the which profits etc. ever afterwards were received by the bailiffs and ministers of this county of Pembroke, until two parts of the Barony of Haverford came into the hands of the Queen, whose bailiffs drew (attraxerunt) the men of the Barony of Kemmeys to come to her court of Haverford to the manifest disinherison of the said Joan. William sought remedy in this behalf, and the case was adjourned to the morrow of Epiphany, meanwhile search to be made among the Rolls, etc. Judgement was given in favour of William de Valance, saving to the Crown all homages &c, due by reason of all lands in the said barony pursuant to complaint of wrongful disseisin by John de Castro

Writ to Richard Simond, steward of the county of Pembroke

Inquisition Tuesday the feast of St Barnabas , 5 Edward III

Aymer de Valencia, late earl of Pembroke, granted to John de Castro and Isabelle his wife for their lives 6 bovates of land in Corston in the said county, who peacefully held the said land without charter for a yearly rent of 46s 8d.

Thomas de Hompton, late steward of Pembroke in the time of Sir Roger de Mortuo Mari, late earl of March, who had the wardship (custodiam) of the said county by the king's grant, wrongfully disseised the said John and Isabel, because the said John took flight for a certain debt which he was bound to David Bermond for a trespass, and for fear of imprisonment. The said John and Isabel at no time quitclaimed the said land to anyone. The said land is in the king's hands by the death of the said Sir Roger, and is of the demesne land of the said county, and of the yearly value of 46s 8d, and is now in the king's hands by the death of Walter de Castro, who held it at will by grant of the said Thomas de Hompton.

[Following plaint of the wrongful disseisin of David de Barry by Roger de Mortuo Mari, of Wigmore, on the ground that David was an adherent of Rees ap Griffith.]

Robert de Mortuo Mari having the wardship of the county and liberty of Pembroke, by reason of the nonage of Lawrence, son and heir of John de Hastings, by the king's grant, caused to be seized into the king's hands the land and the tenements of David de Barry, namely, the manor of Maynerbir, Seint Jamyston, and Neweton, member of the said manor, because to said Roger, as ward of the said county, forbade the said David from entering the manor of Pennaly on the possession of Richard de Barry; because the said Richard had no right to the said manor of Pennaly, except by the disseisin thereof made by him to the said David, and the latter ejected the said Richard contrary to the prohibition of the said Roger; so Roger seized the manor of Maynerbir with its members into the king's hands, on Monday next after Michaelmas 1 Edward III. The said David never quitclaimed his right to anyone, and the said manor is worth £100 yearly, and is held in chief of Laurence, son and heir of John de Hastings, by the service of three knight's fees. This inquisition was taken in the presence of Richard Symond, the steward of the said county, and keepers of the aforesaid tenements.

Writ to the keeper of the county of Pembroke, Westminster, 16 December, 4 Edward III [1330]. By petition of the Council.

Inquisition before Richard Symond, steward of the County of Pembroke, at Pembroke, Monday after St. Mark, 5 Edward III (1331).

The King sent his writ of privy seal dated Northampton, 29 July, 4 Edward III, to Roger de Mortuo Mari, late Earl of March, keeper of the county of Pembroke, ordering him to seize into the king's hands the barony of Walewayn Castle, which belonged to Guy de Brian and to deliver it to Guy de Brian, his son, to hold according to the terms of a settlement made in the king's presence with the assent of Welthiana, wife of the said Guy, the father, and the friends of the parties, viz., that the barony should belong to Guy the son, who was bound to marry and advance his two sisters with the profits thereof, that £200. in which Dame Joan de Carreu was bound to Guy the father for the marriage of Guy the son should belong to him in aid of marrying his sisters; and, whereas the said Guy, the father, was not of sound memory or capable of making a feoffment, it was agreed by the said Welthiana and the friends of the parties that the barony should be seized into the king's hand and afterwards delivered to Guy, the son, to perform the settlement. The said late Earl sent the writ to Robert de Malleye, and the bedel of Pembroke seized the barony into the king's hand on Tuesday after St Bartholomew, 4 Edward III, and afterwards delivered it to Guy the son

To the steward of the county of Pembroke in Wales. Whereas the king lately appointed Gilbert Talbot, his justice of South Wales, John Giffard, William de Rupe, John de Stonford, and William Casse his Justices to make inquisition by the oath of men of that county what evildoers had carried away the goods and chattles of David de Barry at Maynerbir to the value of £500 and had slain Edmund Barry his servant there, etc. and at whose procuration the slaying was done, and who afterwards harboured the evildoers, and to hear and determine the felonies; and afterwards at the prosecution of certain men of the county, by their petition before the king and council in parliament, suggesting to the king that the aforesaid commission was made and granted to the injury of the liberty of the said county, and to the damage and prejudice of the men thereof, and contrary to the custom hereto fore obtaining there, and praying the king to provide them with a remedy, the king gave the petitioners a day before him in chancery concerning the premises, and caused his serjeants for maintaining his estate there to be called, and the petitioners alleged before the king that the county is in the king's hands by reason of the minority of Laurence de Hastynges, kinsman and co heir of Aymer de Valence, late earl of Pembroke, and that in that county a seal to serve the people of the county in their suits ought to be specially deputed, and that such seal used alway to be appointed there in the times of the lords of that county for the time being from time out of mind, without the lords of the county using any other seal in any case there, and this they offered themselves ready to verify by the ways and means that they ought to do; and the king's serjeant on the otherhand asserted that the lords of the county were wont at all times past to make their commissions concerning felonies and trespasses committed at that county under their own seals or under the seals deputed for the use of that county at their pleasure, and this they offered themselves ready to verify for the king; and the king thereupon appointed the aforesaid Gilbert and Thomas de Cheddeworth and Richard Symond to make inquisition by the oath of men of that county in their lifetime made such commissions only under the seal specially appointed for that liberty or under their own seals at their pleasure, and if under their own seals then what lords had done so etc.: and Master William de Carre, Thomas de Carre, and Owen ap Owain, and divers others have shown the king that they are indicted before the said justices of the felonies aforesaid, and that they are put in exigent by the king's writ to the steward because they did not come before the justices or the aforesaid David, and they have besought the king to cause them to be delivered by mainprise pending the said inquisition, if they render themselves to prison; the king therefore orders the steward to cause the said men, if they render themselves to prison, to be delivered upon their finding mainprise to have them before the justices at the day upon which the writ of exigent is returnable, and to supersede the further exaction them.

Close Roll, 9 Edward III m19 (Cal pp411 2)

To the treasurer and barons of the exchequer. William Crippyngis, of co. Pembroke in Wales, has besought the king by his petition as Thomas de Hompton, at the time when Roger de Mortuo Mari, late earl of March, had the custody of co. Pembroke by the king's commission, and Thomas was the steward of the earl there, had caused William to be taken and long detained in prison, and while he was in that prison compelled him by force of such imprisonment to make a letter of obligation to the earl to pay 200 marks to the earl at certain terms contained in the deed, which was delivered to the exchequer for levying that money for the king's use by reason of the earl's forfeiture; and thereupon prosecution was so far made against William for the king at the exchequer that William, appearing in person before the treasurer and barons in the exchequer, asserted that he had made that deed by force of imprisonment as aforesaid, and offered to verify this in the way which the king's court should think fit; and afterwards, because William believing that a certain issue of the affair had been ordained by the king's court, did not come to discuss that affair in his absence before the treasurer and barons on the day given to him according to the process held thereupon, to answer upon that affair, it was considered there that the king should recover £128 6s 8d., this being in arrears of the said 200 marks, the said answer of William not being discussed to be pleased to grant that William may be admitted to such verification, notwithstanding the aforesaid consideration, the king considering that the said deed ought to be of none effect if it should be found to have been made as the said Stephen (sic) pretends to verify, and wishing to do William a favour, in discharge of his conscience, orders the treasurer and barons to admit him to the said verification in the same state in which it was before the said judgement was rendered, the record and process held before them upon the premises being viewed, those being summoned before them who ought to be; and to cause justice to be done further in that affair both for the king and for William, notwithstanding the same consideration, causing the execution of the said £128 6s 8d so recovered, levied from William's lands and chattels for the king's use, to be superseded.

To William Trussel, escheator this side Trent. Order to supersede the livery of Laurence de Hastyngg, kinsman and co heir of Aymer de Valencia, earl of Pembroke, of the castle, manors, towns, comotes, rents, profits and grange committed to Elizabeth de Burgo, late the wife of Roger Damory and executrix of his will, and if he has delivered them he shall cause them to be resumed into the king's hand without delay and restored to Elizabeth together with the issues thereof to be kept until Laurence shall come of age; as on 20 May in the fifth year of the reign, the king ordered the treasurer and barons of the exchequer to pay to William de Burgo, earl of Ulster, 500 marks of the wardships and marriages in the kings hand or those which should come into the kings hand within two years, as is found by inspection of the chancery rolls, and Anthony de Pessaigne, knight, assigned £1500.to Elizabeth of the £8,141 8s.6d. in which the late king was bound to him for divers causes, for a like sum in which Anthony was bound to Roger, and for the said £1,500. the letters for which Elizabeth surrendered to chancery, and the 500 marks to the earl, Elizabeth's son which she undertook to pay to the earl for the king, and for 250 marks which Elizabeth paid to the king at the exchequer, the king granted to her the custody of all the following lands which belonged to Aymer de Valencia, sometime earl of Pembroke in Wales, to wit: Pembroke Castle, not extended beyond the reprises; the town of Pembroke, extended at £36 16s 6d yearly; the grange of Kyngeswode, extended at 113s 8d yearly; the comote of Coytrath, extended at £9 12s 4d yearly; the castle of Tyneby, not extended beyond the reprises; the town of Tyneby, extended at £28 7s 1d.; the manor of Castle Martin, extended at £102 22d yearly whereof £40 assigned in dower to Mary, late Aymer's wife; the manor of Tregeir, extended at 55s 10½d yearly; forinsec rents and profits of all co Pembroke, extended at £22 15s 9d. yearly; the comote of Ustrel of extended at £7 13s 4d yearly, which are in the king's hand by reason of the minority of Laurence, who was five years old on the feast of St Benedict the Abbot, in the eighteenth year of the late king's reign, as is found by inquisition returned into chancery to hold until that heir should come of age, or if he should die before, until his heir should come of age, and that if the heir should be of full age, the king would cause recompence to be made to Elizabeth according to the extent aforesaid, pro rata, for the time lacking of the majority of Laurence if he had lived, and now Elizabeth has complained in the present Parliament at Westminster, that the escheator has directed her to deliver those castles etc., to Laurence or his attorney by virtue of the king's order; and the matter being brought before the council in the said parliament, it seemed that Elizabeth could not be amoed from that custody against her will before Laurence has come of age, in accordance with the tenor of the king's letters to her.

Close Roll 49 Edward III m 3d (Cal pp286 7 8)

Record of proceedings before the council, and reciting the licence given by the king on 20 February in the forty third year of the reign, to John de Hastynges, then earl of Pembroke, to make a feoffment to particular persons to whom he would, and to their heirs of the castle and county of Pembroch, the castles and lordships of Tynby and Kilgarren and the commote of Oysterlowe in Wales, which are held in chief, and to such persons to have seisen of the premises and give the name to the said earl and to the heirs of his body, with remainder after his death for lack of such issue to the king and his heirs; also licence given by the king to the said earl to alien in fee simple to whatsoever persons he would all other his castles, lordships, manors, and lands, with the fees and advowsons which he had in demesne or in reversion in England or Wales, being held in chief, the manor of Asshle, co Norfolk, excepted and of such persons to take again such estate as he pleased, namely, to himself alone or jointly with other in fee simple, fee tail or for life, and to entail, give or grant the same to whom he pleased with remainders as he should appoint at his own will and pleasure; and reciting that by virtue of that licence the said earl by charter enfeoffed Walter Amyas, John Abraham, John Donne, John Prat, clerks, Ralph de Walsham and Thomas Criklaide and their heirs, as well of the said castle and county of Pembroch, the castles and lordships of Tynby and Kilgarren and the commote of Oysterlowe as of all other his said castles, lordships, manors, lands, fees and advowsons held by him in chief in England and Wales which he had in demesne and in reversion, the manor of Asshle excepted, and also of all other his manors, lordships, lands, fees and advowsons in England and Wales not held in chief which he had in demesne or in reversion; reciting also that the said feoffees after demised to the said earl for a term of five years beginning 20 March 43 Edward III, as well the castle and county of Pembroch, the castle and lordship of Tynby and Kilgarren and commote of Oystrelowe, as other the castles, lordships, manors, lands, fees and advowsons aforesaid, the manor of Asshle excepted, and that within that term he (as John de Hastynges, earl of Pembroke, lord of Weisford and Bergeveny) made a surrender to them of his estate in the premises, a confirmation of their estate, and a quit claim with warranty to them, their heir and assigns (a French text follows), dated at his inn at London, 15 April, 46 Edward III; and further reciting that after upon his passage to Gascony the said earl caused a shudule to be written making mention of those feoffments, and specially requesting the said feoffees truly to perform certain his wills, and to dispose of his castles, lordships and lands according to the form of that schedule, causing the same to be sealed with one seal of his in form of a letter patent and closed up, sealing the same when closed, with the ring on his finger, and sending the same so closed and sealed up from the sea to the said feoffees; and reciting that now in the quinzaine of Michaelmas, 49 Edward III, the said earl being dead over sea, certain of the said feoffees, namely, the said Walter, John Donne, John Plat and Ralph de Walsham, came before the Council at Westminster and there delivered the said schedule closed as aforesaid, which was before the Council opened, and there viewed and understand (French text follows), whereby the said earl gave the said feoffees knowledge of his will, charging and requiring them, if he should die over sea before returning to England, of the issues of his said lands to levy and pay his debts, in case full execution of his will might not be by his executors made of his chattels, and then in case he should die without an heir of his body to amortise the manor of Tovenham to the church of St Paul, in order to keep his anniversary every year and to find twelve wax candles throughout the year, burning at reasonable times about his tomb, and if there should be any impediment wherefore the said manor might not be amortised, to sell the same and pay the money therof arising to the profit of the said church and the "Chartehous" in London, for the purposes aforesaid, charging them also in case he should die without issue to enfeoff the king of the castle and county of Pembroke, the castle and lordships of Tyneby and Kilgaren and the commote of Oisterlowe, and to give to his cousin, Sir William Beauchamp, and to his heirs for ever, all other the castle, manors, lands, etc., in England and Wales, which the said feoffees had by his feoffment, and the reversion of the castle, town and lordship of Bergev[eny], and of all the manors, lordships, lands, etc., held in dower by Dame Mary de Seint Pawl, in England and Wales, upon condition that he shall bear the whole arms of the said earl, and shall prevail with the king (face tant eidees nostre Seigneur le roi). That he may bear tha name of earl of Pembrok to him and his heirs, and if he will no or may not do so, to make a feoffment and grant of the premises to his cousin, Sir William de Clynton, upon the same conditions, this schedule bearing the date in the same earl's inn in London, 5 May 1372; whereupon the said feoffees there professed that they ever were and are ready to their power truly to fulfil all the wills and conditions in that schedule contained and to do nought contrary to the earl's will; and the said William Beauchamp, after appearing in person before the Council in presence of the said feoffees, averred, in so far as the matter therein contained concerned him, that he was ready for himself and his heirs to perform the same according to the earl's will namely to bear the whole arms of the said earl and to make suit with the king and his heirs that he and his heirs should have, receive and bear the name of earl of Pembroke in case the said earl should die without issue, praying the king and council and the said feoffees to keep whole and unimpaired the estate and right of him the said William and of his heirs therein; but because the said earl dying over seas has an heir of his body, who is now within age as the council is assured, it is determined that the king shall have the wardship of the said castles, manors, lordships, lands, etc., until the lawful age of the said heir, saving to Anne, who was the wife of the said earl, her dower of the same.

Patent Roll 49 Edward III, pt 2 m 12 (Cal p 194)

To Nicholas Daudele, lord of Kemmoys, and his tenants there.

Whereas they are bound to do certain and various suits, services and dues to the king as for the castle and county of Pembroke, which are in the king's hand by reason of the nonage of the heir of John de Hastynges, earl of Pembroke, who held in chief, and they and their ancestors anciently, and sometimes in the time of John, did the services as they ought, although for some time past they have newly withdrawn the same and still refuse to do them, as the king has learned; the king, not wishing the services to lapse while the castle and county are in his hand to the probable derogation of the rights of the heir, orders them to render the said services to him, and forbids the same Nicholas to draw services to himself as though they pertained to the lordship of Kemmoys in the said county, because they do not so pertain. And if by virtue of this mandate any of the said tenants may seem likely to incur prejudice or injury, then let them come to the council for swift justice.

TRANSLATION OF THE CHARTER OF RICHARD II TO PEMBROKE

exhibited at the Council Chamber, Pembroke. 30/8/35

by A.J.Williams, M.A. LL.B.

Richard, by the grace of God, King of England and France, and Lord of Ireland too, all to whom these present letters shall come, greeting.

We have inspected the letters, patent and exemplification, under the seal of the late Father, Adam, Bishop of Menevia, lately made in these words:

Adam, by divine permission, Bishop of Menevia, to all to whom the present letters shall come, greetings, and the permanent memory of these exploits. We deem it worthy and an acceptable work to God, and we trust to do a profitable service, if through us the noble exploits of Kings, and things particularly useful to the condition of our Diocese, which have long been buried in oblivion, be discovered and brought to light by the aid of our pen. We have discovered in our Treasury, and among the archives of our Church of Menevia, among other old records in an ancient book, the perfect tenours of charters of the old text, free from all faults and suspicions, granted by Henry of renowned memory, late King of England, Duke of Aquitaine and Count of Anjou, to the town and burgesses of Pembroke and Haverford. The tenour of this Charter is a grant to the town and Burgesses of Pembroke, with a rubric of that kind written in red ink, "The Charter of Pembroke, word for word, with nothing added or taken away, is known to be on this wise".

Henry, by the grace of God, King of England, Duke of Normandy and Aquitaine and Count of Anjou, to the Archbishops, Bishops, Abbots, Earls and Justices, Barons and Sheriffs, and to all his faithful people of all England, Wales, Ireland, Normandy, Brittany, Anjou, Poitou, Gascony, ant to all his men, whether dwelling on this side or beyond the sea, greeting. Know ye that I have given and granted, and by this my present Charter, have confirmed to my burgesses of Pembroke all their liberties, immunities and free customs as freely and fully as they had them in the time of King Henry, my grandfather.

Wherefore ,I will and firmly enjoin that all persons who shall enter the port of Milford with merchandise, whether they wish to buy or sell on the land, shall come to the bridge of Pembroke and sell and buy there. Or, if they wish otherwise, let them do business at the Cross, discharging their lawful customs; and that all merchandise which is bought in the County of Pembroke to be carried into England, ought to be shipped at the bridge at Pembroke, paying their customs; and that all persons who come to my market at Pembroke, shall have the security of my peace from the ford of Landfey and from Stentbrigge, and from the Great Ditch at Pencoyt and from the Passage from the hour of nine on the Sabbath to sunset on Monday, if they do not break my peace.

I also command that if any of my burgesses of the said town, for one year and a day shall hold house or lands which belong to the said town, without reproach, and anyone shall afterwards claim right, let him not have it if he shall have in the meantime remained in my kingdom.

If any man of whatsoever place remain in the same town for a year and a day, without reproach, whether he be a freeman or a serf, he shall ever after remain my freeman and a burgess of the same town.

And, when a burgess of the said town, by whatsoever death and in whatsoever place, dies on land or sea with a will or without a will, his heir shall have all his goods by payment of a relief of twelve pence.

I also grant that the burgesses of the said town shall have grazing rights in my forest of Nerbart and Coytrath, and timber rights in the same town by permission of the forester, and they may take decayed wood to burn wheresoever they shall find it; and if they shall have swine in my forests, they shall be acquitted of pannage.

I also will and command that those things which the aforesaid burgesses shall perform in the said town, if the debtors are willing to render in the same town, they may take their pledge (Cattle). But , if it shall happen that my said burgesses ought to go into our army, the safe keeping of my town being in the hands of their warden, let them go with my bailiff, so that they may return at night. But if the army be raised by their warden, so that the merchants may serve me at my camp, the custody of the town being safe, they shall go.

Whatsoever merchandise any of my aforesaid burgesses shall buy, if anyone shall claim the same as stolen, he shall acquit himself by oath and by his witnesses, and he shall lose the same chattel and what he gave for it.

Also, my aforesaid burgesses shall answer no plaint out of their hundred unless it be that which pertains to the royal crown. Their forfeiture in the hundred and shire court is twelve pence.

All the merchants of the County of Pembroke, by the appointment of the warden of the burgesses, shall come to their merchant guild.

I also will and grant, and firmly enjoin that the same burgesses shall have the aforesaid liberties and their customs well, quietly and freely, with the addition of their other liberties and customs which they still remember.

Know ye, furthermore, that I have given and granted, and by this, my present charter, confirm to the same my burgesses acquittance from toll, pontage and havenage, and from all customs whatsoever at Bristol, Gloucester, Winchester, Devon, Cornwall, Rochelle, Normandy and throughout all my lands in commotes, in burgages, in castles, in towns, in fairs and markets, in uplands, in woods, in plain, in roads, in lands, in waters and in all other places. I also forbid anyone to do injury to them in the matters which I have granted to them, and by this my present charter, have confirmed; nor shall anyone draw them into pleas concerning the liberty and acquittance granted to them under forfeiture of fifty pounds sterling.

Furthermore, be it Known to you that I have given and granted to the same, my burgesses of Pembroke, a fair of eight days at the feast of the Apostles, Peter and Paul, and to all coming to the same, my firm peace, those being excepted who have forfeited my peace, and they shall have the same liberties and customs at the fair as they have at my market in the same town on Sunday.

And if any heir is such, (ie. in respect of his youth), that he cannot hold and defend his land, if the burgess who has died left a will, let his heir and the inheritance remain the custody to which he, on his death bed, committed him. But, if he shall not have left a will, then the heir and inheritance, by the advise and consent of the nearest relatives, being my burgesses, shall remain in the custody of any one of his friends. In witness of the foregoing, we have ordered our seal to be hereto attached.

Given in our manor of Landfey, the seventh day of the month of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand three hundred and sixty eight, and in the eighth year of our consecration.

We,(ie. Richard II), therefore having perused the tenour of the exemplification of the said letters of the aforesaid Bishop, at the request made to us by the Burgesses of Pembroke, the tenour of these presents we have made to be exemplified. In witness wherefore we have caused these, our letters, to be made patent. Witness ourselves at Westminster on the sixth day of the month of February in the first year of our reign.
